David Roh is Assistant Professor of Digital Humanities and American literature at Old Dominion University, and co-director of The Media Park. He holds a BA in English from the University of California, Los Angeles, an EdM in Educational Technology from Harvard University, and an MA and PhD in English from the University of California, Santa Barbara.

Before entering academia, he spent several years as a web designer for an Internet startup company. His foray into the IT industry lasted until the dot com bubble burst in spectacular fashion. He would parlay that experience, however, in shaping his research interests in new media studies, law and literature, contemporary American literature, and transnational Asian American literature.

He is author of Illegal Literature (University of Minnesota Press, 2015), and co-editor of Techno-Orientalism (Rutgers University Press, 2015); and he is currently at work on a third book project. His work has also appeared in MELUS and Law & Literature.

Originally hailing from Southern California, he has at various times lived in Vancouver, Boston, Honolulu, Tokyo, Seoul, and now resides in Norfolk, VA.
